SHRUGGING off jet lag, delegates to the 112th Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU) assembly in Manila took domestic flights and long bumpy bus rides in order to see the Philippine countryside.

Some 20 delegates from Switzerland, Finland and the Netherlands began flying in on Wednesday. But instead of staying in their hotel rooms in Manila, which virtually came to a standstill with the observance of Holy Week, they grabbed their backpacks and headed for the pristine beaches of Boracay, the rice terraces of Banawe and other tourist destinations.

The six-day IPU conference, which expects to gather 1,500 parliamentarians from over 130 countries in what is expected to be the country's biggest tourism event of the year, won't begin until April 3.

First to arrive

"The delegates from Finland who arrived last night hied off to Boracay today. The others went to Mindoro, Banawe, and Hidden Valley in Quezon," said Carmen Razon-Arceño, chair of the organizing committee for the hosting of the IPU, in an interview.

The first to arrive in the country was Hermann Burgi, a member of the Swiss Council of States, who flew in with his wife on March 23.

So far, none of the 1,500 participants, including 45 heads of parliament, who had confirmed their attendance had canceled their trip following travel advisories by the United Kingdom, United States and Australia warning of terror attacks in Metro Manila and Mindanao.

"So far we have not received any cancellations," said Arceño, who is also director general of the Office of International Relations and Protocol at the Senate.

Peace forum, etc.

This is the first time the Philippines is hosting the IPU assembly since it was established in 1889. An international organization comprised of the parliaments of sovereign states, the union serves as a forum for worldwide parliamentary dialogues, the establishment of democracy and peace in the world, among other objectives.

Topping next week's conference agenda is the protection of women and children, and migration. IPU assemblies are held twice a year. The next conference is set for September in Geneva.

The Cultural Center of the Philippines complex is undergoing a P17-million facelift in time for the assembly which will be held at the Philippine International Convention Center.

Over the past months, workers have been constructing asphalt roads in and around the CCP complex, putting in instant gardens and other landscaping work, installing lights, cleaning up the place, and repairing the neglected facades and interiors of the CCP and the PICC. With Juliet Labog-Javellana

Roxas gets vs invasion of privacy by phone firms

Invasion

SEN. ROXAS has filed a Senate bill to protect consumers from the invasion of privacy by phone companies. The bill, known as the "Privacy Protection Act," aims to prevent phone companies from selling or sharing personal information about their customers without their consent.

Roxas said that the bill is necessary to protect the privacy of consumers, who are often unaware of the extent to which their personal information is being collected and used by phone companies.

The bill also provides for a civil penalty of up to $10,000 for any company that violates the law.

"The bill is a necessary step to protect the privacy of consumers," Roxas said. "It is a step in the right direction, and I hope it will be passed into law soon."

The bill is expected to be passed by the Senate in the near future. It is a response to growing concerns about the privacy of consumers in the digital age.

the 1990s, the number of people who have been infected with HIV has increased significantly. In 1990, there were about 1 million people living with HIV in the United States. By 2000, that number had risen to about 4 million. And in 2009, there were about 12 million people living with HIV in the United States. This increase in the number of people living with HIV is due to a number of factors, including the fact that more people are getting infected with HIV, and more people are surviving longer with the disease. One of the main reasons for the increase in the number of people living with HIV is the fact that more people are getting infected with HIV. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that more people are having unprotected sex, and more people are using injection drugs. Another reason for the increase in the number of people living with HIV is the fact that more people are surviving longer with the disease. This is due to the fact that there are now more effective treatments for HIV, which allow people to live longer with the disease. As a result of these factors, the number of people living with HIV has increased significantly in the 1990s. This increase in the number of people living with HIV has led to a number of challenges for the healthcare system, including the need for more resources to care for people with HIV, and the need for more research into the disease. However, the increase in the number of people living with HIV has also led to a number of positive outcomes, including the fact that more people are aware of the disease, and more people are getting tested for HIV. This has led to a number of people getting treated for HIV, which has helped to reduce the number of people who are dying from the disease. Overall, the increase in the number of people living with HIV in the 1990s is a complex issue that has led to a number of challenges and positive outcomes. It is important to continue to research the disease and to provide resources to care for people with HIV, in order to reduce the number of people who are dying from the disease.

There is a need for a more comprehensive approach to the management of the environment, one that takes into account the needs of all stakeholders and the long-term interests of the community. This requires a shift in the way we think about the environment, from a focus on protection to a focus on sustainable development. This means that we need to consider the economic, social, and environmental impacts of our actions, and to work towards a balance between these three pillars of development. Only by doing so can we ensure a better future for ourselves and for the planet.

Abstract: This study examines the effects of the 1997-1998 Asian financial crisis on the export performance of the Thai textile industry. The results show that the Thai textile industry experienced a significant decline in export performance during the crisis period. The study also finds that the Thai textile industry has a high degree of export concentration, which may have contributed to its vulnerability to the crisis. The study suggests that the Thai textile industry should diversify its export markets and improve its export performance to survive in the global market.

body is so sad, and so many have tears in their eyes," said Hubert Wichert, from the town of Essen.

A physician from Nice, France, Milou Drici, said that "as a doctor, I felt for him. It is an ordeal for him and you could see his frustration. You have to admire his strength and fortitude. The faith of the people, as you saw today, helps him overcome his difficulties."

For the first time since John Paul's papacy began in 1978, Easter Sunday Mass at the Vatican was celebrated without the Pope as he continued his convalescence following two recent hospitalizations for breathing crises. For years, John Paul also has suffered from Parkinson's disease.

John Paul missed participating in all major Holy Week events, a strong indication of his weakened condition.

On Feb. 24, surgeons inserted a tube in John Paul's throat to help him breathe, and since then, the Pontiff has uttered only a few words in public.

Easter message

In his Easter message read by Sodano, John Paul said people were hungering for "truth, freedom, justice and peace."

John Paul also asked God to "give also to us the strength to show generous solidarity toward the multitudes who are even today suffering and dying from poverty and hunger, decimated by fatal epidemics or devastated by immense natural disasters."

A prayer was said during the Mass asking for "life and new energies" for the ailing Pontiff and the entire Catholic Church.

TV hookups broadcast the service to 74 countries.

Sunday morning began chilly, with a light drizzle. Later the sun timidly broke through the clouds.

"It would have been better with the Pope," said Sheri Zimpelman, who was in the crowd at the Sunday service with her husband, a US serviceman stationed in Aviano, northern Italy.

Her husband, Thomas Zimpelman, said. "If he's sick, he should do what's best for him. His presence is enough."

John Paul also skipped the Easter vigil Mass in St. Peter's Basilica on Saturday night to rest for Sunday's blessing. German Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, a close papal aide, celebrated the service, and read a papal message in which John Paul assured the crowd that he was watching the Mass on television in his Vatican apartment.

On Friday night, John Paul appeared via a video hookup to the faithful at the Way of the Cross procession at the Colosseum. John Paul was seen, always with the camera at his back, as he sat in his private chapel and watched the procession on television.

The Pontiff traditionally has used the Easter Sunday message to reflect on war, poverty and terrorism. He also developed a tradition of delivering holiday greetings in dozens of languages.

"It pains him to be on the sidelines," the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano wrote Saturday. AP phemisms and tell it like it is.

"We have to be frank so as to be understood and not be misinterpreted," Negros Oriental population officer Jeanette Villarubia told journalists at a forum on reproductive health last week. "Don't be ashamed to use words like biat (vagina) and otin (penis) because these words are not bastos (obscene)."

The Provincial Population Office, in coordination with the Integrated Provincial Health Office (IPHO) and several nongovernment organizations, has been conducting forums on adolescent reproductive health in Negros Oriental since last year.

Initially, the high school students from the cities of Bayawan and Tanjay and the towns of San Jose, Sibulan, Valencia, Ayungon and La Libertad were embarrassed, Villarubia said.

"But they have since come to realize that what we are talking about is part of each one's anatomy, and that this discussion is good for them," she said.

Culture

However, not all journalists at the forum were sold on such a direct approach.

Invoking culture, Bing Aguilar, news director of radio dyGB, said journalists could not bluntly use local sexual terms in their broadcasts.

Jimmy Abayon, news editor of Sun Star Dumaguete, agreed: "Talking about sex to children is really difficult for parents. It's foreign to our culture. If we impose it on ourselves, we will destroy our culture."

Villarubia conceded that talking about sex to children appeared easier for Western parents. But she pointed out that Filipino children had become quite westernized.

"We mock foreign cultures that encourage children to bring contraceptives when going out on dates. But that's probably applicable here now. Whether we like it or not, our children do it. And when they have a family at a very early age, they kiss their future goodbye," she said.

The survey says...

Villarubia cited a survey on the sexual behavior of adolescents in three Philippine cities showing that 26 percent of the males and 10 percent of the females had engaged in premarital sex.

She said the survey also showed that

- Of the females who had engaged in premarital sex, 17 percent said they had sex on their first date, and 10 percent said sex was forced on them.

- Of the 2,277 cases of child abuse recorded by the Department of Social Welfare and Development nationwide, 25 percent belonged to the 16-18 age group.

- Sixty percent of new HIV infections occurred in the 15-24 age group, the same group that registered 74 percent of the total number of illegitimate births.

- Only 4 percent were knowledgeable about contraception.

Openness

Dr. Bernarda Cortez, IPHO communicable diseases specialist, also advised parents to be more open in discussing sex with their children.

"It may not be part of our culture, but so are the pornographic magazines and suggestive TV shows to which the children are exposed every day. We have to open up because if we keep quiet, more kids will be put in harm's way," she said.

Fr. Fred Duran, a married Catholic priest who is now Tanjay information officer, said he used to be very conservative about sex and related issues.

"It was through seminars like this that my mind was opened," he said, adding that he was married by the time he attended the seminars.

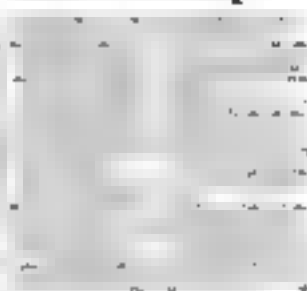

Duran is a staunch advocate of reproductive health education.

Dealer's license seen to elude pre-need firm

By Richard L. Beretta

NEW YORK (AP) — A New York state court has ruled that a pre-need funeral home cannot obtain a license to sell funeral services before the funeral. The court's decision, which came in a case involving a funeral home that had been sued by a family for failing to provide services as promised, could have significant implications for the pre-need industry. The court found that the funeral home had violated state law by selling funeral services before the funeral, and that the family was entitled to a refund of the money paid for the services. The decision is expected to be appealed, but it could set a precedent for other pre-need funeral homes.

Europe commission to reduce tariff on Asean tuna exports

By Anthony J. Caprio

BRUSSELS (AP) — The European Commission has agreed to reduce the tariff on tuna exports from Asean countries. The reduction is part of a broader effort to improve trade relations with Asean and to support the tuna industry in the region. The tariff reduction will apply to tuna exports from Asean countries to the European Union, and is expected to take effect in the near future. The Commission's decision is based on a study that found that the current tariff was too high and was causing significant harm to the tuna industry in Asean. The Commission is also considering other measures to improve trade relations with Asean, including reducing tariffs on other goods and services.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Federal Reserve Bank of New York has announced that it will increase its discount rate. The increase is part of a broader effort to tighten monetary policy and to control inflation. The discount rate will be increased from 5.25 percent to 5.5 percent, and the increase is expected to take effect in the near future. The Fed's decision is based on a report that inflation is still too high and that the economy is still too hot. The Fed is also considering other measures to tighten monetary policy, including increasing the federal funds rate and selling Treasury securities.

PS Bank eyes 30% growth in '95 net profits

By Anne C. Brown

NEW YORK (AP) — The Postal Savings Bank of the United States has set a goal of achieving 30 percent growth in its net profits for the year 1995. The bank's management believes that this goal is achievable, given the bank's strong financial position and its commitment to providing excellent customer service. The bank is also planning to invest in new technologies and services to further improve its performance. The bank's net profits for 1994 were $1.2 billion, and the management expects to reach $1.56 billion in 1995. The bank is also planning to increase its assets to $100 billion by the end of 1995.

The above data indicate that the estimated degree of change between the two periods was smaller for the 1990-1991 period than for the 1980-1990 period. This may be due to the fact that the 1990-1991 period was a relatively stable period for the U.S. economy, while the 1980-1990 period was a period of significant economic change.

Oldest Marian image

Ermita Parish prides itself for housing the oldest Marian Image in the Philippines. Its patroness and titular, "La Nstra. Sra. Virgen de Guia" (Our Lady of Guidance) is reportedly to have been found by Legazpi's men alongside shores of Manila in 1571. The "little brown virgin" is said to be the patroness of seafarers and mariners.

Ironically, Ermita is the center of shipping companies and manning houses in Manila.

Ermita also prides itself for having one of the best and most beautiful Altars of Repose in the Archdiocese of Manila. Thanks to a devotee, a native Ermitano, who happens to be one of the Philippines top interior designers, Tony Adriano. Parishioners and devotees are always in eager anticipation of how the Altar of Repose would turn out.

This year's design centered on an antique silver tabernacle housing the ciborium with hosts. Similarly two antique silver angel candelabras, each with 13 candlesticks, flanked both sides. Each article placed on the tableau had a distinct story of its own, adding to the majesty and regality of the whole assembly. Antique angels of solid narra complemented the entire design.

These wooden angels seemed to have been specifically made for the purpose, since their fingers pointed toward tabernacle while the faces looked towards the faithful as if saying, "Here He rests." These figures and other ornamentations were strategically placed that it directed the eyes of the adoring faithful to the object of veneration and did not in any way distract attention in the prayer vigils.

The soft candle glows and the glaring spotlights added drama and subtlety to the tableau. Lights ingeniously placed lent the tabernacle a supernatural radiance, rendering a calming effect that soothes the senses, making it conducive to meditation and prayer.

The singular beauty of this tableau was enhanced by the extensive use of flowers, arranged in a manner that characterized subdued elegance. Adriano refused to mention names of donors who generously contributed the flowers.

Yellow and gold, white and silver were these year's predominant colors. There was a subtle joy in this sorrowful moment. Joy in sorrow was the mood as the faithful awaited the glorious promise of the Lord's Resurrection.

Another role of parenting is to establish an environment of support for the child's development. This involves providing a safe and secure environment, as well as providing the child with the resources and support needed to explore and learn. Parenting also involves setting boundaries and rules, which help the child to understand the limits of acceptable behavior and to develop a sense of responsibility.
